[] between Uzhgorod and Chop. This part of the road was completely reconditioned in 1951. It had a hard, asphalt surface, approximately seven to eight meters wide, soft shoulders, and ditches on both sides. Between 1950 and 1952, the Latoritsa River bridge, which had been blown up during the war, was reconstructed. This reinforced concrete bridge is near Chop, and the Uzhgorod-Chop road crosses it.
